Dear Ms Li Li,

We refer to the below emails.

It was reported that the Insured vehicle was inching out towards the junction when involved in an accident with TP.

We had spoken to the Insured before where he confirmed accident details but denied full liability of the accident. We did explain to Insured before with regards to the liability and the TP claim issue but he doesn't want to settle the claim. There were no further evidence available from Insured.

Based on the circumstances of the accident, we are of the opinion that the liability is not to the Insured's favour.

TP claimant is also chasing for this matter.

The finalized COR after inspection is $650 (labour only) with 2 recommended working days.

As such, kindly advise if we can proceed to settle the TP claim at best and/or for your further instructions please.

Thank you.

Can you elaborate further? Why is insured disputing? From the sketch in the GiA report, it means that insured has right-of-way.

Are you able to tell from the damage pattern whose version is more credible? Before you proceed settlement, insured's issue has to be add

Dear Ernest,

We refer further to the below email from Li Li.

We had further reviewed the matter and we are the opinion that our Insured's statement is more probable.

Based on the damaged profile to both vehicles, if TP scenario is right, the damages sustained to our Insured should be confined to the side only. But Insured's vehicles damages also involved frontal which had been brushed badly.

As such, we would like to reject the TP claim.

For your approval and/or further instructions please.

Thank you.

Dear Vic,

We refer to your email of even date.

Based on the damages, it seem unlikely for TP not to suffer dents at his right rear fender. Instead, he had this long black swiped markings across his right rear area fender and right rear door, which may support the possibility that his car was moving at the material time of this collision.

As for insured's damages, it was restricted to the corner of his left front bumper which may possibly support that he was unlikely not moving as much.

Unless TP is able to provide clear coloured scene photographs to support his statement and position of his vehicle; otherwise, please proceed to reject TP.

Meanwhile, kindly check with insured if he has any scene photographs that has yet to submit to us.

Thank you.
