Dear Hsiao Tong, here is the picture of the road. I was on the right lane, the lorry on the left and he swerved out suddenly when the car in front of him stopped to let someone out at the zebra crossing.

Saying I hit him on the back is inaccurate as I scrapped my side mirror.

I look forward to hearing from you soon. Thank you

Regards
Margaret

>>> Regarding the accident, Below is my version of the accident:
>>>

>>> 10minutes before 1pm on the 22nd sept, along Lorong Liput, I was driving behind a delivery lorry. The car in front of the lorry had stopped abruptly and the lorry tried to change lanes to my lane without any warning or signal. I was forced to step on my brakes at full force to avoid the lorry. Thankfully, as seen on my left side view mirror in the picture I have attached, the scratch was minor. When I got out of the car, I said to the driver that he had tried to change lanes suddenly without checking that I was close behind and without any signal or warning and the lorry driver was very aggressive and shouted at me. He said that because I was behind him, I was definitely in the wrong. He was very unreasonable and kept threatening me. The discussion was getting nowhere.
