Dear Li Li,

We refer to your email below.

Please find attached TP video for your reference. Based on the footage, there was a jerk to stationary TP vehicle while Insured reversed. We are of the view that there was contact between both vehicles at that time.

We also attached the some photos provided by the TP repairer which shows some damages to the front left portion of the TP vehicle.

With regards to the Insured's query on the COR, we do not have the adjusted COR yet as there was no survey done to TP vehicle due to unclear liability.

As such, based on all available information, we are of the view that Insured is liable of the accident.

For your approval on Direct Settlement as TP is chasing.

Thank you.

Make sure that your surveyor check the original claim damages with the damage parts, a lot of workshop and claims used old damage parts to claim inflated damaged parts. The original claim damage is only a 30cm scratch to the bumper that do not need to change the entire bumper ($2,000?) and the front netting.
