I was turning left into Farrer Road from Holland Road. A taxi was in front of me. He stopped to check he was clear to make the left turn. There was no traffic coming so he started to move forward. For some reason he stopped quite abruptly again, even though it was clear to make the turn. We were both going slowly and my car nudged into the back of his.

He got out and was very cross and was saying I should speak to his car company, actually it was difficult to understand him. It started to rain quite heavily and there was traffic coming up behind us, so I said/gestured that we should move out of the way. I could see clearly see there was no damage to his car. He moved his car around the corner and so did I. Then he did not get out of his car again, so I assumed that he was either happy there was no damage, or he felt he had communicated enough with me that I should speak to his cab company. So I assumed that he had taken my number plate details (as I did his) and he was satisfied everything was okay and so I drove off.

When I got home, I sent an email to his cab company asking for his details just in case he wanted to contact me.

To be honest I am surprised that this is being investigated!!

Many thanks
