Hi Sherwin

We refer to your fire report submitted on even date.

I have looked through your report and we noted that there were no evidences suggesting that our insured vehicle is modified that can lead to short circuit and eventually vehicle will caught fire, it is also neither manufacturer defect as there was no product recall of our insured vehicle's make and model.

The cause of fire is purely electrical in nature base on the original wirings of the insured vehicle. Hence, the policy will be engaged for this case.

We also noted that ARC has provided you with estimates, please proceed to negotiate and provide ARC the marking of the estimates and copy me inside for my authorization. I have copied Raymond from ARC in this email, you can also contact him at 6468 8834.

Thank you,
-Julie

Thank you for your email of even date.

Are we able to point out if this is due to a product recall from BMW? Or the short circuit was caused by the last servicing of the vehicle?

Hello Julie

Our preliminary findings to the fire on the insured Motor Car is likely due to electrical nature, a short circuit had happened between the engine alternator and its wiring harness. We have spoken to both owner and driver and established their relationship as good friends. The Motor Car was used for leisure purposes at the material time of fire.

Hi Bryan and Sherwin

We have a fire case and we wish to appoint LKK to conduct Technical Inspection of our insured vehicle.

Our insured vehicle is at Automotive Repair Centre (38 Woodlands Industrial Park E1, #05-18 Singapore 757700). Please contact them at 6468 8834.

Currently, our insured has yet to lodge an accident statement, I will send it to you tomorrow once I have it on hand. In the meantime, I will provide you with the police report (as attached).

Thank you,

Julie Mangubat
